

ABSTRACT

This invention provides method and apparatus for the point of sale activated delivery of various products and services. The serial number of a product or service is associated with an identification number. The identification number is recorded on a 5 card. The identification number is activated at the point of sale. This active identification number can be used to facilitate the delivery of various products and services. Various devices comprising a card and package combination are provided.

40061694 102604